Outdoor Dining Restaurants in San Diego: 12 Great Spots

Eater Staff on Apr 23, 2015, 10:00a

With nearly perfect patio weather year-round and a perpetual presence on "Best Places To Live In America" lists, San Diego is an alfresco diners dream. With warmer, longer evenings taking us into summer, from downtown to North County (in alphabetical order) we take a look at twelve of the new-ish rooftops, patios and courtyards where you can eat and drink while lounging outdoors, sometimes even with million dollar backdrop views.

Do you agree with our choices? Leave your favorite patio in the comments or tweet us your suggestions. Updates will be added as spring and summer progress.

Since launching last year, Amy DiBiase's modern eatery continues to strengthen. With million dollar views, dynamic design and an imaginative menu, drink options include innovative, ingredient-driven sippers courtesy of the Snake Oil Cocktail Company and an affordable boutique wine list. Best For: Drinks on the bayside patio.
