

LIVING

Forget Cupid: Here's 13 ways to fly yourself to a better V-Day

By Chris Bunting

February 10, 2014 | 7:55pm

Photo: Shutterstock

There are but two days a year our puritanical society ceases and desists its slut-shaming of us debauchees: Halloween — obvs — and sweet, sublimating Valentine’s Day. When the latter comes around, you can’t mess around, gents — fail in the Valentine’s Day gift games and you’ll be lucky to score a bronze. The she in your life actually wants you to ... sigh... earn it. That doesn’t have to suck when it takes the form of a well-crafted laycation. Here are get-lucky-number 13 ways to get the ball rolling — all prices are per night, per couple unless otherwise noted.

San Diego

She’s got beauty and brains, does she? Lay nude her noodle at San Diego’s bungalow-styled Paradise Point Resort & Spa on lagoon Mission Bay, who’s offering a “Love and Learn” package through February: “Chemistry in the Kitchen” couple’s cooking classes (Chef James Ausem is your prof; he might give you detention for not drinking in class), a two-hour sailing lesson on Mission Bay and an “Island Origins” two-hour couples’ spa experience (like playing doctor, but with herbs). The starting rate for Love & Learn with all three activities is $1,015 for Valentine’s Day weekend spent sleeping in a bungalow.