

San Diego's Spring Break Options For Families

Posted by Forbes Travel Guide Correspondent Julia Weiler

March 14th, 2013 05:57 AM

With miles of golden sand, endless sunny skies and an array of world-class resorts and attractions, San Diego is an ideal spring break destination for families. Top off your trip with activities like poolside sunning, action-packed beach days, hiking excursions and outings to thrilling amusement parks and you've got a vacation to remember. Sound like a lot to squeeze into just one week? Here are some San Diego resorts that make it all possible:

Paradise Point Resort & Spa

With 44 acres of lush tropical gardens, cabana-style accommodations, five swimming pools, an onsite marina and SeaWorld so close you can get there via the resort's private speedboat shuttle, Paradise Point on Mission Bay is heaven for families.

Kids of all ages will love roaming the landscaped grounds, which include gushing waterfalls, meandering lagoons and koi- and duck-filled ponds. Get active on the 18-hole putting green, basketball and tennis courts, 27 miles of waterfront bike and walking paths, or take it all in from the property's soaring observation tower.

A mile of protected shoreline offers a playground for sandier pursuits. Families can spend a day playing beach volleyball, horseshoes or just sunning and swimming in the serene marine environment. More adventurous members can hit the water on a Jet Ski, sailboat or stand-up paddleboard then meet back on the sand for a marshmallow roast at one of 14 fire pits.

